

Synopsis for The Second Time Around – A Guide Through The Maze Of Internet Dating

2-line Summary:

This book was written from the perspective of a couple who met on the Internet in order to help you find that second love.

Short Synopsis:

We wrote this book simply to help others get through the maze of internet dating using real world internet dating experiences. We hope to allay the fears of those of you who are not sure about internet dating using a step by step approach. We will give the reader some real-world guidance to this process from the prospective of both Dee and I. Finally, we want to help others miss the potholes and avoid the false starts and stops that many of us had.

Medium Synopsis:

Since we met and became a couple, we discovered numerous other couples our age and younger who had met as we did. We swapped stories, both good and bad. What became obvious was that for the vast majority of us, we all had to slog through the process to have that success yet we were all happy. That's the good news.

The bad news is that this trip to success is full of sink holes, false starts and stops. To add to the difficulty, we found that for seniors (over 60), there is virtually nothing out there to help guide us through the rigors of Internet dating. Oh, there are a few self-declared “experts”; that being the case many have never been through the elation or disappointment that is often found when using internet dating sites. What is written seems more like someone's effort to complete an academic thesis.

Long Synopsis:

Technology has stealthily seeped into almost every aspect of our lives through smartphones, tablets, and laptops. Over the last decade it has even moved into our love life in the form of Internet dating sites. According to a recent Pew Research Center study, 15% of adults have used online dating sites and/or applications. The fastest growing groups are the youngest adults and those over 50. That same study found that 41% of Americans know someone who uses online dating and 29% know someone who has met a spouse or long-term partner via online dating. The result is that internet dating is here, it is useful and now an accepted way to meet people.

It is our intent to bring some sanity or perhaps reality to the process of Internet dating. You have heard the phrase "Been there done that"? Well, as far as Internet dating goes, we have been there and done that. We met on a dating site and we fell in love. Our journey to the love we now share was not without a lot of hard work, disappointment and patience.

We are neither psychologists, marriage counselors, or experts on the dating scene. We are two people who used the internet to find each other and succeeded. Along the trail we followed, we learned some valuable lessons both good and bad.

Our goal is to help you succeed in your internet dating effort. We will ask you to look at yourself and answer some difficult questions. We will provide you with some hints on writing a good profile. We let you know some of the do's and don'ts regarding your pictures and will share with you ideas on how to screen potential dates. We will introduce you to what we call the BBM syndrome and much more.

If we accomplish what we set out to do, your journey through the maze of internet dating should be easier and hopefully more successful. In the end, it is all up to you.

6 Points of Interest about the Book's Content:

1. We help you assess if you are ready to date and why the internet might be your best approach.
2. We help you determine what you should expect in a relationship and then look at the relationship types.
3. We will help you take a good look at yourself and who and what you are looking for.
4. We will give you ideas as to what your profile picture should look like and we will help you write a great profile.
5. We emphasize you doing your due diligence. We will give you ideas how to do that and where to look.
6. Finally, we give you suggestions on that important first date both from a personal and safety perspective.
